

Charities & Not for Profit

Protecting your organisation, supporting its success

Charities are there to help those in need. But who helps the charities?

Working for a charity or not for profit organisation can be incredibly rewarding but with it comes a great deal of pressure, particularly for trustees.

It is hard to "do good" these days. The public's belt is tight and charitable giving is falling. Public sector funding is being cut. Charities and not-for-profit organisations are under pressure when it comes to how to generate income in order to meet their objectives, as well as increased demand for their services. Add to this ever more strict corporate governance requirements, and an increasingly litigious society in which reputation is everything, and charities are treated no differently to corporate businesses. A trustee's role has never looked more challenging.

It is critical, then, that trustees surround themselves with people who are able and motivated to meet the challenges of a constantly changing landscape: people with energy, who are adaptable, think laterally, solve problems, identify opportunities and drive positive change.

Partners you engage are vicariously responsible for your reputation, so they need to understand what

Overcoming challenges and recognising opportunities

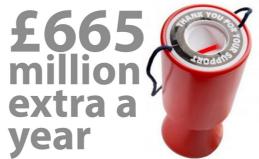

With the right organisational culture, empowered people and the support of partners who understand their mission, charities are able to make the right decisions in order to ensure...

- effective governance
- the safeguarding of important assets, including people
- the achievement of charitable objectives
- engagement of the right people to share challenges and deliver success.

Some of the biggest challenges facing today's charities and not for profit organisations, and how these can be addressed, are highlighted below.

Challenge	Risks	Potential solutions
Risk of trustee liability Convincing the public that your cause is worthy and your charitable objectives deserving of support requires greater transparency than ever before. Trustees are held accountable for their every action and its impact. 24 per cent of charities consider legal liability their biggest insurance risk. ¹ ¹Charity Insurance Report 2012, Third Sector Research	Strict governance requirements from the Charity Commission and a more litigious society mean the risk of a claim resulting from an innocent mistake is very real – can you withstand the financial impact of a claim? Even successfully defending a case can be financially crippling. The speed with which information spreads via social media means you could quickly find your organisation at the centre of a PR nightmare, with a loss of public confidence in your brand as a result. Fundraising risks According to the Charity Commission, fundraising is the most important source of income for 16 per cent of charities. Events, in particular, present a broad range of potential risks. Charities face great pressure to demonstrate exactly what income from fundraising is being used for.	If you rely on fundraising you have a duty of care to your employees, fundraisers, volunteers and the public. Fundraising activities are becoming increasingly elaborate and present new risks every day. What happens if an accident occurs, a member of the public is injured or property damaged? What kind if liabilities are you exposed to? Can you afford the financial cost and cost to your reputation that will result? Can you demonstrate appropriate use of monies from fundraising?	 Documented fundraising strategy Regular contact with funders Public awareness and profile Approval and authority procedures Risk assessment process Skills evaluation and training Health and safety reviews and training Insurance cover including event and cancellation

Emerging risks By their nature, emerging risks can be difficult to identify and quantify, but they are likely to pose the greatest threat to your organisation.	A lack of strong leadership could have a negative impact on your strategic direction and ability to satisfy the needs of your stakeholders, and a decline in trust and potential loss of funding as a consequence. Data mismanagement, for example loss or illegal use of confidential information, could result in fines and reputational damage. New technologies bring new risks. Social media presents a risk of damage to your reputation in a matter of minutes; cyber crime exposes you to the risk of fraud or loss of funds; and how will you manage the risks posed by the Cloud and of staff using personal devices at work? Climate change and extreme weather could affect your ability to deliver your services, for example through damage to property and equipment, power cuts or preventing travel. Potential property loss The most common insurance claim made by charities in 2012 was for damage to buildings: 4.7 per cent of claims ² . An incident such as a fire or flood can be devastating, and not just because of the potential cost involved in repairing buildings and contents. ² Charity Insurance Report 2012, Third Sector Research	The scale of disruption to your operations in the aftermath of a loss could be enormous. Do you have a business continuity or disaster recovery plan in preparation for such an event? Would you still be able to deliver your services to your beneficiaries? What would be the impact if not? The success of any charity or not for profit organisation is largely down to its people. Organisations need to ensure they are able to attract, protect, retain and get the very best out of the right people to help them deliver success.

Do you have the right organisational culture and the right people on board to help you succeed? Do they • Documentation of systems plans and feel protected from risk, valued and rewarded? Are they motivated and empowered to help you meet your objectives? Or, do you have disgruntled staff, pursuing their own agenda, risk high staff turnover, a your reputation and, in the extreme, employment tribunal cases? Pensions liabilities/def	ficit
Some charities and not for profit organisations have historic, current or will take over pension scheme liabilities. These are typically related to defined benefit schemes (but not exclusively) and can have a significant and in some cases catastrophic impact.	Is the ongoing cost to your charity or not for profit organisation of meeting funding levels sustainable? Or is your long-term viability and success under threat? Do you have or are you facing a deficit on your balance sheet? Is your scheme funding plan appropriate for your organisation? Do your trustees fully understand the level of risk attached to it, or are they potentially exposed as a result of a lack of measures to mitigate the risk?
