

In today's challenging business environment, management decisions can come back and haunt you in the future. Companies typically carry Directors and Officers (D&O) liability insurance – and provide broad indemnification – in order to protect senior managers and directors. However, if the D&O insurer refuses or fails to provide coverage, or if a company is unable, unwilling or legally prohibited from providing indemnification, the personal assets of directors and officers could be at risk.

That's where Allied World's Executive ForceField® fills the void. The Executive ForceField® policy provides broad Side A, or non-indemnifiable coverage, on either an excess or primary basis. The breadth of coverage incorporates many innovative enhancements creating a leading force in the protection of directors and officers.
