

Poultry farm insurance that started with a glass jar

Tailored insurance for the poultry sector

Achmea was established over 200 years ago when 39 farmers put money into a glass jar, to be compensated in the event one of them had a haystack fire. Their commitment to a truly mutual approach to insurance remains alive and well in Achmea Australia today.

With considerable experience in the poultry industry we have a team of local Risk Specialists who are committed to helping you manage and insure against risk.

Our poultry specialists provide expert guidance in identifying, mitigating and managing risk, whilst providing invaluable support in the event of a claim.

Protect your poultry assets

Global experience, local support

Our local Risk Specialists and Netherlands-based poultry experts regularly visit our clients – and being fully aware of the latest poultry technologies, building methods and construction materials, provide an invaluable source of knowledge to the Australian poultry community.

And for poultry businesses, that hands-on guidance and support creates a vital layer of extra protection for our clients.

Our unique business interruption cover is designed to keep your business going, even while your poultry assets are repaired or replaced. Businesses are insured for their lost income and operational costs such as loan repayments and other fixed costs during the selected period of insurance.

Tailored insurance options

Our local Risk Specialists will conduct a thorough risk assessment, identifying and analysing all the risks faced, before providing a summary report of the assessment and transparent insurance cover to prevent, manage, and cover risk.
