

CargoGuard

Trade on AIG eXtra and Acturis

AIG's CargoGuard insurance provides annual 'All Risks' cover on Institute Cargo Clauses 'A' basis for domestic and international transits by sea, air and land. Option to include UK storage as part of Stock Throughput.

Key Product Benefits

For buyers and sellers

Depending on purchase terms, buyers and sellers can find themselves responsible for different costs and risks when trading internationally. CIF, ExWorks, FOB and CFR are common shipping terms that result in varying degrees of exposure. No matter what side of the transaction clients are on, CargoGuard protects their assets.

Warehouse to warehouse

The risk of loss or damage is not just while goods are in transit, and can occur at many stages (e.g. during packing or while holding at an intermediate destination). CargoGuard covers goods from their initial movement from a warehouse right up to delivery at the final destination (and beyond if damage is not identified until items are unpacked.)

Commercial realities

Unfortunately, all sales are not final, and many businesses will need to accept returned items due to refunds, warranty replacements or repairs. CargoGuard protects against these business realities by making it easy to insure shipments originating from a customer's premises.

Exhibitions

It's not only buyers and sellers that have insurable cargo exposures. Organisations, exhibitions and trade shows require valuable items to be shipped UK and overseas and displayed for a period of time. CargoGuard offers up to 30 days cover for the installation, duration, dismantling and temporary storing of items at exhibition sites.

Engineers' tools and Representative samples

Many businesses equip their sales reps and engineering teams with expensive samples or tools that are kept overnight in private vehicles and houses. Through cover extensions, CargoGuard protects a company's assets while their employees go about their business.
